December 25, 2018 – The Yeshiva World

Naaleh Torah Tutors is the biggest game-changer in Jewish Education today! Until now when a child needed help in limudei kodesh subjects, their parents had to hire a private tutor to help them overcome their challenges. The cost of a private teacher can be prohibitive, as the average tutor charges between $60 to $100 an hour.

Naaleh has partnered with the AviChai Foundation to create Naaleh Torah Tutors using cutting-edge online platform, charging only $20 per session.

Students are paired with highly qualified private tutors or learning specialists. Focusing on the child's own learning style, these teachers provide the student with the support and individualized instruction needed to improve his or her skills. Sessions take place using cutting-edge web conferencing technology to teach students via the Internet.

“Our tutors and learning specialists are trained on how to take advantage of technology to enhance student engagement,” says Rabbi Doniel Tisser, Program Supervisor of Naaleh Torah Tutors. “Communication lines between Naaleh tutors and parents and schools always remain open for feedback and discussion. Our tutors are highly qualified and possess years of experience teaching and studying Torah. Our learning specialists have impeccable credentials and will help your child succeed!”

Additionally, Naaleh Torah Tutors is working in tandem with schools to provide quality individualized attention to help students succeed.

Private tutoring is no longer a privilege reserved for the very wealthy or those with serious learning issues. Naaleh has created a program which can give every child the support needed to reach his academic potential, by bringing professional tutors at affordable prices to any computer!”
